PERSONAL LEADERSHIP BELIEFS

The guidance light when things start to turn slow, fall back and in dark times.

1. POWERFUL CONVERSATION CAN CHANGE LIFE

When was the last time
you had a meaningful chat?

I always look for different and powerful conversations in my life. I had a number of them although not many people are open for it.
Powerful conversation makes you think and usually push
you to greater heights.
Words can be life changing.

2. HAVE A VISION. WHAT'S YOUR WHY?

When was the last time you think about your future self?

Simple statement that we call vision can help you believe in what you do in trying times. Without, I find myself go with the flow then drown in the "busy-ness" of day-to-day things. Have your WHY, then How and What will follow suit.

Here's my WHY: "I am the source of ENERGY to create creative touch points for leaders to create more and better creative touch points to make the world a better place."

3. DEVELOP PEOPLE AND YOURSELF

When was the last time you pay for your own growth program?

It is easy to give someone opportunity, however to provide enough support to make that someone successful or excel a different matter altogether. Often, as leaders the opportunity we give is work in disguise but we also need to relentlessly ensure the work get's done. I am in the opinion that only with sheer commitment to develop own self can a leader gives more to develop others. Leaders are readers.

4. DO LEAP WHEN BEHIND

When was the last time you feel you are ahead of everyone else?

Sometimes, I get assignment that is spiralling down and waiting to go bust. When this happens, I don't wait or go by-the-books. I push things and step on some people toes along the way (sorry). Some people like to see something to fail and you happen to be there. The goal is to make the leap, because playing catch up not going to make it.

5. FREE UP KNOWLEDGE AND EXPERIENCES

When was the last time you develop and share knowledge with others?

This is my life tagline. I am not a fountain of knowledge (still learning daily) but I know I work really hard to thrive. A lot of knowledge is either too deep in someone's brain or the organization's bureaucracy, it is wasteful and a sin to let this continue. Knowledge gives power and we can make a difference in the market place when we share.

6. THINK BIG, START SMALL

When was the last time you feel like you are losing it already?

I love to dream about something big, and I also have learned the hardship to do something big. Thus, I believe starting small would allow room for improvement and creativity. During the starting stage, I usually spend a lot of time experimenting and testing hypotheses. The moment it's ready, scaling up would just about adding resources. This belief also lead me to introduce significant innovation in products and processes throughout my career.

7. BE SITUATIONALLY PRAGMATIC

When was the last time you are challenged and you need to get back?

Dealing with many people from different levels and in many situations demand great communication skills. While some leaders suavely good at this, I tend to stumble. I used to get carried away when I had conflicts with co-workers and colleagues. Surprisingly, I had very few problems with my leaders and bosses. The rule of thumb is to relentlessly be honest and pragmatic. As the equilibrium point moves, so does your pragmatism.

A man with a beard and glasses, wearing a yellow jacket, is looking up at a massive, towering wall of ice. The ice wall is composed of many vertical ridges and grooves, creating a textured, almost crystalline appearance. The background is a soft, hazy white, suggesting a snowy or icy environment. The man's expression is one of awe and contemplation.

8. STAY HUNGRY, STAY FOOLISH

When was the last time you read a meaningful book?

I borrow this from Steve Jobs. Another learning from this belief is to run my own race. Sometimes when things don't go my way, I get entangled with perception trap about how the grass is greener on the other side (it's always had right!). So, when that happen I have to realize quickly that my time will come and I just have to be patience with my mind and hands open.
